VA-DOLI – 6 Letters I Never Noticed – Until Now

It continues: Virginia updates its permanent COVID-19 workplace safety standard

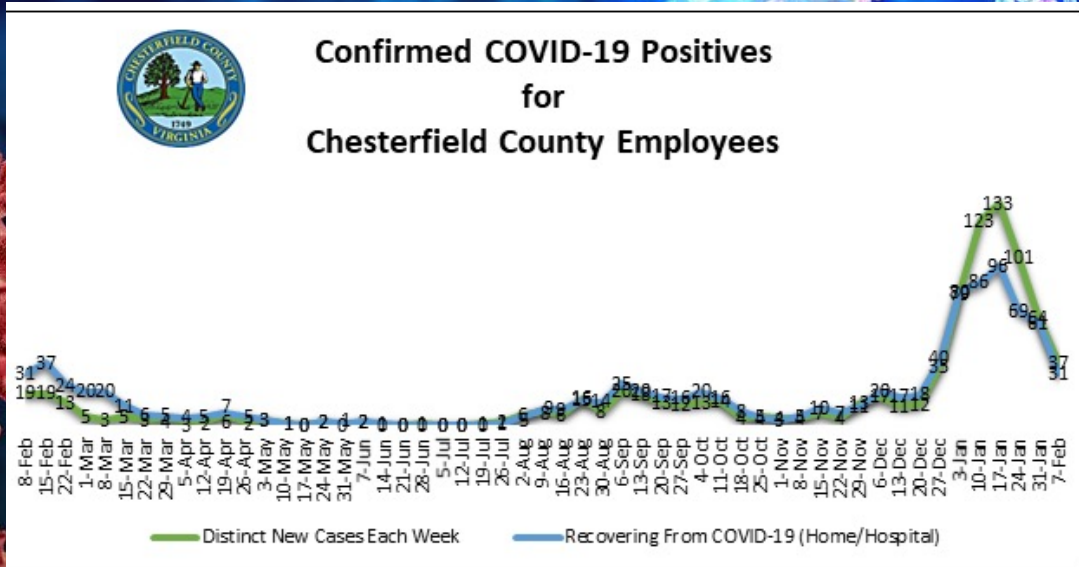

By Betty S.W. Graumlich and Noah Oberlander on 13 September 2021
 Posted in COVID-19/Novel coronavirus, Employment, Employment & Labor (U.S.), US Alert, Virginia Employment Beat, Workplace Laws and Regulations

On August 26, 2021, the Virginia Department of Labor and Industry's (DOLI's) Safety and Health Codes Board (Board) voted 8 to 5 to update and continue its COVID-19 permanent workplace safety standard. That vote came despite the fact that the bulk of COVID-19 business requirements issued by Virginia Governor Ralph Northam ended on May 31 and the Commonwealth's COVID-19 state of emergency declaration ended on June 30, 2021. After the Board's vote and review by the Governor, the updated standard became effective upon publication on September 8, 2021 and replaces the earlier permanent standard promulgated in January. While the original standard's general framework remains largely intact, the updated standard contains several notable new or substantially updated requirements and attempts to more closely align Virginia's regulations with the guidance from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC).
